A Rich Harvest.

It costs no more to sow good seeds than it does to sow old and worthless stock, how foolish is the person who Mr. John Primo went to St. Louis fails to get the best to start with. No doubt you have often thought of this, when your garden has not done very well.

Will you jog along in the same old way this year, or use a little forethought and send to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for their Catalogue which contains a list of at that's new and good ?

Their seeds are always reliablesure to grow and never disappoint Send 10 cents for catalogue and de duct this amount from first order. Really costs nothing.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Drowned in the "Cut Off"

On Wednesday of last week a misterious and fatal accident occurred on the river near Kaskaskia, it is presumed in the "cut off," which ended the lives of three well known citizeus. Two of them, Donatus Beiter, an old time resident and druggist and John Kintz, Jr , a son of the village clerk of the historic town, the other a colored lad, Tom Little, son of Henry and Eliza Little, formerly of Chester, now of Sparta The three, accompanied by Welda Menard, started off from Kaskaskia on a hunting expedition.

They secured a punt or flat bottomed boat and crossed the old channel back of the village to a sand bar where Menard left the boat. The arrangement was for him to cross the bar and meet his companions, who continued in the skiff, at the upper end. On reaching there they were not on that side but looking across he saw them near the shore close to the "cut off." Two of them were in the boat, the other on shore had a rope and was towing or "cordeling" the craft up stream towards the "cut off" They were also seen at this work by John Morris, a resident living near the mouth of the Okaw."

About that time, perhaps 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when last seen by Menard and Morris, the wind was blowing strongly and the river rough. The steamer Benton passed up and added to the swell about the time they were last observed. They were then working their way towards the 'ent off" and since that time no human eye has seen them. It is supposed that when they reached the main channel they launched their frail craft, said to be old and rotten, and it either sank with them or capsized and they met their death in the waters of the Mississippl. Search has been made but nothing was discovered, nothing seen of men or boat, no clue of any kind, until Friday when William Danis found an oar, which was identified as one belonging to the boat, two miles below Kaskaskia in the main channel of the river, and it is reported that the ther oar and a box, known to have been used for a seat, were fished out of the river Tuesday. There is but little doubt that the parties were drowned and that death came upon them suddenly. The sorrowful affair has cast a gloom over the community where the men were well known and highly respected. Effort will be made to recover the bodies but it is hardly likely they will be found until they float to the surface. - Chester Clarion.
